

A striking art installation that pays tribute to all who serve and have served

The National Western Stock Show’s Armed Forces Memorial will celebrate the spirit of the American West and honor those who have served and continue to serve our great country. The memorial will be prominently located at the entrance to the National Western Stock Show’s new Legacy Building, where the two primary streets serving the redeveloped National Western Center meet. Its prominence on the National Western Center campus embodies the deep ties between the National Western and the U.S. armed services.

The Armed Forces Memorial’s centerpiece will be a stunning sculpture by Colorado artist Gail Folwell. Three larger-than-life, stylized-bronze horses in full gallop will rest on an eight-foot tall granite pedestal. One face of the pedestal will host two-foot-diameter shields emblazoned with the emblems of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, and Space Force.

Mounted on the other three flanks of the pedestal will be bas-reliefs honoring the six branches of the armed forces of the United States. Six seating areas will surround the pedestal, each engraved with a core value of the American armed forces and the National Western Stock Show.

The Armed Forces Memorial will at once celebrate the legacy and vitality of the National Western and honor our military forces and their families. The memorial will combine wonder, grace, and humility in an iconic work of art that will at once inspire, teach, and heal.
